A modern twist on the classical style, in three acts

Hip-Hop

Watch classically trained performers straight from the Paris stages perform amazingly graceful classical pieces to music from 80 Cents and the Blue Tooth Clan.

Pilates

We all know how strong ballet dancers are; in this five-minute piece, ballet is used as a tool to highlight the core strength of male and female dancers. Background music is from the New Agers.

Samba

Straight from the streets of Rio, these ballet dancers from South America show you the spicier expressions of traditional ballet. Music by the Buena Mezcla Club.

Last night I was lucky enough to attend the opening performance of this year's first show by the Pittsburgh Ballet Company. Being a member of the press, I sat in the front row, close enough to see how hard the performers were breathing. And believe me, it was obvious that they were working very, very hard.

These professionals must have been working very hard for months leading up to this groundbreaking new work because, although I am not a trained dancer and do not pretend to be an expert in any form of theater, the performance seemed flawless. The fluidity of the dancers' movements went beyond grace, and seemed very natural, seamless, and perfect. Although the titles of each act brought to mind a wide variety of dance and musical styles, every step was clearly from traditional ballet. The innovation in the choreography has to be seen to be believed, as it clearly reminds the audience of hip-hop, pilates, and samba, while at the same time only using ballet gestures to do so.

The musical choices were also intelligent and ideal for the styles. Every song came from popular culture of the past decade, and was recognizable to nearly everyone in the audience. This familiarity highlighted the beautiful steps that accompanied the well-known melodies.

Although fans of traditional ballet may not approve of these works, I highly recommend Modern Moods to audiences of all ages and backgrounds.

To: Janet Tsai
From: Fred Willard
Re: Cafeteria food options
Date: 4/9/12

Dear Ms. Tsai,

My name is Fred Willard and I began working for the magazine last month, in the public relations department. I have really enjoyed my work here in the last month, but there is one small problem I'd like to bring up.

I'm a strict vegetarian, both for moral, and health reasons. This has been my diet for a decade now. A big perk of working for this company is the free lunch room that all employees can use for breakfast and lunch; however, I've not been able to take advantage of this opportunity, as the vegetarian options are almost non-existent.

I'm not asking for any major changes to the menus, but it would be excellent if there could be at least one option for me at each meal. I've heard good things about the quality of the food, and am looking forward to trying more of it.

Thank you for understanding.

Sincerely,

Fred Willard
