Rachel: 21 _____?

Rachel's father: Well, when I was in elementary school, my dream was to be a pilot and fly around the world.

Rachel: That sounds exciting!

Rachel's father: Yes, but then in junior high school, I became interested in taking pictures and wanted to become a photographer.

Rachel: Oh, that's why you have such a nice camera! I love the photographs you take, dad!

Rachel's father: Thank you, Rachel!

Rachel: What other dreams did you have?

Rachel's father: Let's see... When I was in high school, my dream was to become a professional baseball player. You know, I've always loved baseball.

Rachel: Really? 22 _____!

Rachel's father: Yes, I've become too busy with work to enjoy the sport...

Why don't we go to the stadium to watch a game together this summer?

Rachel: Sure! That would be so much fun! ...So, when did you finally decide to become a teacher?

Rachel's father: Well, when I was in college, I had a great teacher who taught me World History. She also pushed me to believe in myself and to realize my dream of becoming a great educator.

Rachel: Wow! That's why you are now a history teacher!

Rachel's father: Exactly! I was very lucky to have met her. I hope to introduce you to her someday.

Rachel: Really? 23 _____!

The University of Bologna in northern Italy is quite different from North American universities. One major difference is its age. Founded in the tenth century, it is the oldest university in Europe. Its ancient buildings give students an appreciation of history. North American universities, 38, are all relatively new, and students are surrounded by more modern buildings. Another difference is the campus. The buildings that 39 the University of Bologna are located in various places of the city. There is no campus or special university area, as there usually is at North American universities. Unlike the North American university campus, there are no trees or open spaces for students to meet in the Italian city. 40, students meet on the streets, in the coffee shops, or in the squares of the city.

Immigration in the United States continues at a steady pace in the twenty-first century, with hundreds of thousands of legal immigrants every year and many more illegal immigrants. The immigrants of the early twentieth century came mostly from Europe, but today's immigrants come from many different 36 and various cultural and racial backgrounds. Like the early immigrants, they have a strong desire to work hard and do well in the new country. For this reason, many people believe that the U.S. government should not 37 to immigrants. They have helped the country grow in the past, and now the United States could benefit from them again.

8 次の英文を読んで、問 41 ~ 問 45 に答えなさい。

In 1900, two places in the world never seen by humans were lands of snow and ice — the North Pole* and the South Pole.

As a young man in Norway, Roald Amundsen read about explorers who tried to reach the North Pole, and he wanted to try, too. It became his dream. The first step was to 41, so Amundsen went to sea as a worker on a ship when he was twenty-two. Later, he worked on a ship that went to Antarctica*. Antarctica is the coldest place on Earth. The South Pole is in the center of Antarctica. It was an exciting trip, but he did not try to reach the South Pole.

Amundsen sailed on many ships and worked his way up to the top jobs. He was now a famous explorer, and he started to plan his trip to the North Pole. But an American named Robert Peary reached the pole before Amundsen. Amundsen wanted to be first, so he changed his plans and went to the South Pole instead. He heard that an English explorer named Robert Scott was on his way to the South Pole, so Amundsen sent him a message. He said that this was now a race.

When Amundsen reached Antarctica, he and four of his men started toward the South Pole. There was only ice and snow. He had teams of dogs pull the food and tents across the snow. They climbed mountains of snow and fell through holes in the ice. Finally, they were near the South Pole. They didn't know whether Scott was already there before them. They reached the South Pole on December 14, 1911, and there was no sign of Scott. Amundsen won the race.

Scott and his group were on their way, but they were not prepared for the extreme weather. They did not have the right clothes, and Scott had horses instead of dogs. The horses were not used to the cold weather of Antarctica, so the men could not use them. The men then had to carry everything. Scott

問 43

次の質問の答えとして最も適切なものを、①～④から1つ選びなさい。

Why did Amundsen change his mind from going to the North Pole to going to the South Pole?

- ① Because he thought that the weather at the South Pole was not so extreme.
- ② Because he heard that someone else also had a plan to explore the North Pole.
- ③ Because he did not want to be the second person in reaching either the North Pole or the South Pole.
- ④ Because he lacked confidence in competing with others.

問 44

次の質問の答えとして最も適切なものを、①～④から1つ選びなさい。

Why did Amundsen succeed in reaching the South Pole while Scott failed?

- ① Because Amundsen was well-equipped for its weather but Scott wasn't.
- ② Because Amundsen had more horses and dogs than Scott.
- ③ Because Scott and his men were too busy searching for valuable natural resources.
- ④ Because Scott and his men often argued with each other leading to many problems.
